Mountain of the Sacred Footprint. Adam's peak, or Mount Samanala, a rugged mountain in the Island of Ceylon, is known throughout the orient as "Mountain of the Sacred Footprint." In a flat, rocky basin at the foot of this mountain in stone as hard as blue granite there is the perfect imprint of a gigantic human foot, five and one-half feet long by two and one-half feet wide. The Ceylonese Brahmans have a legend to the effect that the imprint was made by Adam, our first parent, but the Buddhists declare that it could have been made by no one but Buddha.

"Slade wouldn't go! Ha, ha! Guess not much! You don't get the old ground hog that far from his hole back of the hill. Everybody's busier than in sheep shearing time, you know, harverting their grain. Reason no one's been along, I reckon. I'm through in fine shape. I tell you, and I've promised myself and gang to Snyder for a week. And, man, you'd ought to be looking after yours. It's spoiling fast, I noticed." He laughed at the startled expression that widened the hollow eyes. "Forgot it, had you? Well, you want to see to it right away. I must mosey. I'm out on a sweet errand. Got my new house done. It's a beaut, too, and furnished tiptop. And now the rage is ready I'm going up to settle the date of taking home my bird. Lizzie's fought shy, but she'll pull steady when we're tied all right. Ha, ha!" "Lizzie?" Harris repeated vaguely.

"Sure! Lizzie Bradley-Lamson. Kind o' thly name, I take it; something like those swell New Yorkers. Ha, ha!" He roared boisterously at his flash of which I knew to be of such a nature wit. "Well, hope you'll pull up soon, So long!" He stamped away, whis tling, leaving the door open.

> In the silence that again closed upon him Harris lay and stared out at the onlyering eddles that whirled in at times, aggravating his burning beat and thirst. But he did not notice them. He was striving to steady his throbbing brainand analyze the torturing inner sense of pain and less which now intensified his bodily distress.

The crop-the c-r-o-p-that was all right. It was great. He could put up be dainty cottage he had planned so ften these last months, since the promise of early summer had shown such abundant fulfillment in the ripening fields. The crop-the crop! "Oh, shut up?" the gruff one comanded. "I'm the doctor, and I say for you to drop it and go to sleep."

There was mother again, with the gourd from the spring, and he drank and drank fill they took it away, and then he still down and down and out where there was only a cool, quiet blankness

It was late the next day. The sun was sending its level rays across the door when Joe Harris came to himself and looked about with a calm and growing consciousness

There was a faroff, cheery sound of busy machines. Through the open window he could see his fields swarming with men and teams. The food wagon and enting tent stood back by the well the important cook bustling over a fire. His room was cool and fresh, Flowers stood upon his little homemade table with the doctor's medicine glass.

Bit by bit he studied it out, and as he recognized Mr. Bradley and the boys and other neighbors and Mrs. Bradley berself putting his freshly washed shirts upon the line his eyes filled, and he murmured a faint "God bless them!"

At the sound there was a stir by the head of the bed, and a girl with auxlous eyes leaned over him and touched his forehead with a shy little hand, He looked at her a moment; then he muttered feebly, questioningly, "Lizzie

Bradley-Lamson? With a vest of tender tears she laid ber warm pink cheek against his, murmuring: "No, Joe, dear; no! Lizzle Bradley Harris!"

The Apathy of the Chorus Girl. The ambitions of a chorus girl, as a rule, die young and as many refuse lines as accept them.
